

The dreaded darkness will disappear

How can I relate to that which confines me? How can I see through the darkness that surrounds me? How can I move through the thick illusion of my consciousness? How can I see beyond the veil to the truth that lies within me?

How, indeed!

Well, I will tell you. This is how.

Walk with me awhile and you shall see the Light that shines beyond the darkness that imperils you. You will follow in the crook of my arm and walk peacefully among the fields strewn with the terrors of your ancestors. You shall see through the hopelessness of humanity and wander through acres of former pain. You shall accompany me through the lanes of despair laden with humanity's feelings of hopelessness.

And there you shall find a respite from the dead dreams of the past. You shall see the folly of it all and understand the many passages you have been through. Time after time you have suffered with humanity to comprehend how deeply you are dissolved in the casings of this world. Your imagination flies to redeem your hopes of refreshment and renewal — and they are indeed here — within the kingdom of your being.

Take hold of the lamp I hold alight for you as we walk this passage together. Notice how shadows appear before us but disappear in the light. You must hold your own lamp alight and see for yourself that the shadows are but illusions so easily passed away.

Open yourself to the Light and you will see glorious things way beyond your imagining. The dreaded darkness will disappear and though your flame may flicker, yet it will not fail to guide you to the other side of the veil. You shall see beyond the darkness that encloses you in the closet of your mind.

But be prepared for the opening door that floods your soul with Light and illumines all consciousness. The flame within you burns bright indeed — if only you let it.

Open your heart to what your mind cannot imagine. Open your whole being to the Light and shine your truth for others to follow — that all may see beyond the shadows, arise out of the depths of despair and see with new eyes the heartbeat of compassion, the hope of eternity, the reality of who you are.

Say "Peace" to my people and rejoice in the Light that illumines all things and makes everything bright.

Sail into the wind and refresh yourselves with the Light of Eternity. For we are all one and in that oneness, we are all Light.

Bless you, my child,
I am White Eagle