

Memory is but a passing moment

I am White Eagle.

The memory of that which was is now past. There is no memory that lasts forever. Though you think it is written in the Akashic record, it is not forever engraved upon your mind. It is kept where all memories are stored in the greater consciousness of that which we know as God.

But for you, that memory will not last forever. It will fade as the blossoms fade from the dogwood trees or as the clouds that come and go upon ever-changing skies. There is no wind that blows so fierce that does not blow these thoughts away.

Memory seeks to keep you tethered in the past of who you were. It does not serve to move you forward. Think then, only of the present — of that which is, for that which is is that which endures. For that which is, is perpetual because the moment is ever present and the ever-present moment is with you always.

You cannot see how bound you are by memories of the past and yet if you could untangle your foot from being caught in that vine of remembrance, you would walk freely, more openly, more wisely in the present moment.

Reach down and untangle yourself. Free your feet from the web that would keep you prisoner. Free yourself from the tangle of the past that would keep you enmeshed in memory forever.

Memory is but a passing moment. Let that moment go. There is no real solace in memory, for memories are happy and sad and all mixed up with every emotion under the sun. Memories will keep you in turmoil and make you ill with the sickness of remembrance.

Move on. There is more for you to know, more for you to experience that has nothing to do with that memory. Let it pass.

Cling only to the present moment and each present moment as it comes. Let yourself see the Truth, let yourself be the Truth, let yourself know the Truth. It is in the present moment only, not looking to the past or to the future, but only to that which lives within the eternal present moment.

Seek within yourself the wisdom that lies within. There you will find truth and beauty, harmony, peace – all that you seek. Love will enfold you, wrapping its arms around you, protecting you, guiding you, keeping you safe from the web of memory, from the tangle of future worries.

Live within the enfolding arms of Love Divine, keeping yourself centered always on the Light within you. For there is the Way, the Truth and the Life. There is the magic that you seek, the door to be opened.

There is the kindness, the love, the comfort that clouds over the past and makes the present moment a shining beacon for you to keep and nurture and follow until all Truth Divine burns within your heart, mind and soul.

There is the kindness that you seek, the rapture of love and joy divine, the holiness of perfection, the keenness of the highly sentient being, the heart's comfort, the peace divine, the wisdom and joy that you seek.

Enter within these gates and know that God is Love and that Love is within you, deep inside. Let it grow, let it sustain you, let it be. For you are whole within yourself. Rise up and meet the sun for the Light Everlasting is yours to enjoy.