

Gather your strength

I am White Eagle.

May peace and peace and peace be everywhere and always with you. The robins have gathered to fly south for the winter. So too must you be gathering your strength for what is yet to come. The severity of the winter reflects the severity of the time.

You need to be absolutely clear in your intentions, in your focus, in all that you see and do. Mindfulness of the highest order is now required. It is of the essence to be fully mindful of who you are, where you are going, what you are doing.

You must never forget your divine spirit within – that which moves us to high endeavor, to greater love, to wider openness, to more acute sensation, to be more fully alive, to be completely whole in spirit within the ever-expanding human being.

So would your consciousness be raised to vibrate, beat faster. As the birds on the wing, so too you will take flight and honor the God within you – the Great Spirit that indwells in us all. Be mindful of this. Do not be afraid.

Do understand the need for severity, for discipline, for single-minded devotion. Let your eye be single that all within you may be whole, completing the cycle of the seasons, but remembering that the season of love is eternal.

So Love conquers all and permeates your entire being. And in that Love, all else is eliminated for the Love is transformative in nature and will purify and demolish all fears, all anxiety, all anger, all discontent. Love will burn away the dross, leaving only the pure gold of the Truth that dwells in every soul and that Truth shall shine, glowing light, a beacon for all to see.

Put aside your fears. Go forward in faith and confidence that all is well. Let peace and peace and peace be everywhere and always with you.

So be it.

Message channeled September 2010

www.whiteeaglespeaks.net

©Karen A. Shaffer 2013. May be freely disseminated.