

Upon chanting the Zoroastrian names of God

May peace and peace and peace be everywhere – and also with you. To this divine salutation add messages of peace to all who come within the umbrella of the Divine name for whatever name by which the Divine One is called yet we are all the same.

We are all One together. Beneath this shower of names, beneath this tent of holiness and well-being, we are all wholly One. Let these Divine names be your own and let them resonate within you until truly you are One with the Divine. For within the sense of these names is the vibration of holiness, of wholeness – the frequency that links us with the Divine and brings us all home.

Speak these names with ardor, of love within your hearts, and become all that these names imply. So too you will recognize your holiness, the indwelling spirit that animates your entire being. Let it vibrate with intensity until you feel yourself transformed, wholly and completely, truly and finally in the image of that which you name.

For we are all Love, Love Divine, encompassed in the heart of God and forever animated by the one great heartbeat of the universe that dwells in us and we in it, that sustains us and moves us and propels us to our final home in Oneness with the Divine that you have so beautifully named for all to hear and all to know.

Let peace and peace and peace be everywhere – within and without – wholly manifest in the universe of our being, in the wholeness of our sustenance, in the Light and Love in which we have our being.

Sing rapturously that which is holy and name the divine in your heart of hearts, so too you will know peace and we will lift you up to that Divine Name.

So be it.
